

Give your kids a party at The Priory It'll be a picnic for you.

HOW IT ALL STARTED IN 1975

Mr Sanders, of The Priory, Deddington, has been an advocate of ice cream since he was a boy.

In fact, his fondness for ice cream led to his creating a fifties style parlour in Deddington - a rare kind of business for a village.

The parlour is Mr Sanders' pride and joy. Before becoming an ice cream parlour, it was a wholesale confectionery business with an ice cream shop as a sideline.

The business was started by Mr Sanders' father, Walter George, back in 1920. The ice cream venture started in a small way when Walter bought an ice cream making machine for £120 - a magnificent sum in those days.

After the death of his father, Mr Sanders discontinued the wholesale side of the business. Now he runs the parlour with his mother, Mollie.

He has travelled the Continent and studied the various types of parlours and ice creams and inevitably he put this experience to work.

"I have tried to copy the Continentals and I don't mind admitting it, or the parlour being thought of in that way. It is nice to create a meeting place, ideally where people can play games, talk and eat just like they do abroad" he said.

"I have a juke box in the shop but not in the parlour. That would not be fair on the other people. It is an accident that this fifties design has coincided with the present nostalgic fashion. But I must say that I always liked this look when I used to see such places in films on television," he added.

Mr Sanders explained how he would like to develop more interesting ice creams.

"Germany and Italy, obviously are the countries that perfect ice creams. Of course, the price and quality is much greater. They put everything inside them.

"They use an awful lot of liquors. And they do flambe, on which you pour brandy and set fire to it. I would like to develop an ultimate ice cream," said Mr Sanders.

Each day is different for Mr Sanders and he attracts customers from far and wide. An American comes in three times a week and always orders the same - a Priory Pleasure - consisting of ice cream, butterscotch, nuts, bananas and chocolate sauce.

Watching life go by gives Mr Sanders great pleasure. "It is nice to meet people. I never really believed in the wholesale business. This parlour is something I dreamed up myself. It is what I have always wanted to do. And I love doing it," he said.

Since 1975 the Ice Cream Parlour has changed into an Ice Cream Pizza Parlour and Restaurant.

History of Ice Cream

First Century Fiddler Fathers Fountain Fantasies

Legend has it that the Roman Emperor Nero was the father of frozen desserts. He sent armies of slaves to the Northern Alps for ice and snow to freeze his favourite fruit drinks.

In the Thirteenth Century, Marco Polo brought back a recipe for making water ices from the Orient. Ice cream was soon to follow!

CHAS OF THE FIZZ

Charles the First of England went bananas over a frozen cream dessert, and awarded his cook a £500 annual stipend to restrict the recipe to royal repasts.

A Revolutionary Discovery

Early in the 1700's ice cream caught on in the American colonies. George Washington had pewter ice cream pots and ice cream making machines in his Mount Vernon home. Later, President Madison's wife, Dolly, introduced ice cream to the White House dining room. Since then, ice cream has been as American as apple pie.

SYRUPS, SODAS & SUNDAES

Soon after carbonated water was introduced by Philip Physic (no phooling). John Matthews invented the soda fountain. Soon, syrup flavourings were added, and one summer day in 1874 a desperate concessionaire who had run out of syrup substituted ice cream instead. Presto! The ice cream soda was born.

Then when prohibitionists in Evanston, Illinois, declared soda water intoxicating and outlawed it on Sundays, an enterprising drug store operator served just ice cream and syrup without the soda water. Sundaes were born (they were called Sundays until the town fathers objected).
