Membership rejected

Deddington parish council has rejected an invitation to join the Deddington Society.

The society asked the council to send a full member to its meeting — and not just an observer. Then the council representative could take part in society discussions.

But Mr J. Gardner, who had been to the society's previous meetings as an observer for the council, said: "I do not wish to join the society as a full representative for the council.

"I feel I would be putting my own views forward and not the views of the council. It is impossible for anyone to speak for the whole parish council."

The council decided that they would continue to send an observer to the meetings of the society. But if it wished to approach the council on any matter, then it was welcome to do so.
