The Dedington Blues,
Or, The RUMP Rumped.

YE Sons of Old Oxford be merry and fmg,
Let Wenman and Dafhwood in Echos ftill ring,
And fspread round the County this good piece of News,
That the Rumpers were rump'd by the Dedington
Blues. Sing Tantarara True Blue, &c.

A Vifit of Whigs Lady--- did decree,
To a Town that was honeft, and hearty, and free;
Where, to fhew its Regard to old Whigs and old S---
The Rumpers were rump'd by the Dedington Blues.
Sing Tantarara &c.

On April the firft it was ever a Rule,
To fend on an Errand the foft April Fool,
But now for that purpofe the Second we'll choofe,
When the Rumpers were rump'd by the Dedington
Blues Sing Tantarara, &c.

Then T-----r the fteady, and TONY the Wife,
Came laden with Promifes, Speeches and Lies,
The honeft Freeholders in hopes to amufe;
But the Rumpers were rump'd by the Dedington Blues.
Sing Tantarara, &c.

When firft they march'd in they look'd valiant and ftout,
But feem'd mighty fmall before they march'd out;
They feem'd mighty small - and how could they chufe,
For these Rumpers were rump'd by the Dedington
Blues. Sing Tantarara, &c.

Sir E-----d appear'd in a terrible Fright,
Poor TONY as one that wou'd get nothing by't,
And P-----r like one that had nothing to lofe,
When the Rumpers were rump'd by the Dedington
Blues. Sing Tantarara, &c.

There fancified Jonathan prick'd up his Ears,
With Looks that betray'd his Predefinate Fears,
On a Beef-Eaters Place he did nothing but mufe,
Whilft the Rumpers were rump'd by the Dedington
Blues. Sing Tantarara, &c.

O Jonathan, Jonathan, govern thy Grief,
The worft come to worft, you may eat your own Beef;
Keep your knife and your Steel; the Halbert refufe,
Now the Rumpers are rump'd by the Dedington Blues.
Sing Tantarara knock down, knock down.

When a *Female you whipp'd in pretty dumb fhow,
 What JUSTICE you painted twas eafy to know;
 His Worship fuch Difcipline knew how to ufe,
 Long before he was rump'd by the Dedington Blues.
Sing Tantarara Lafh all, Lafh all, &c.

'Twas right we muft own when the Rump hung on A--fe
 To flog it in fhrewd emblematical Farce,
 A Scourge it deferves, and to give it its dues,
 It fhall still be well jerk'd by the Dedington Blues.
Sing Tantarara whip Rump, whip Rump, &c.

Now join my brave Dedington Boys, in the Song,
 To Honour be true, and in Honefty strong,
 And ftill, tho' it croffes a Penfioners Views,
 May the Rumpers be rump'd by the Dedington Blues.
Sing Tantarara down Rump, down Rump, &c.

In full flowing Bumpers our Glaffes we'll fill,
 And drink a good Health to our Friend on the Hill,[‡]
 His Health in a Bumper let no one Refufe,
 For the Rumpers were rump'd by the Dedington Blues.
Sing Tantarara True Blue, True Blue, &c.

‡ Aynhoe on the Hill.

* Alluding to a Piece of Mummery, exhibited (as it is faid) for an Emblem of Popery; but which, from its more obvious Conformity to a late ever-memorable Tranfaction, was by a great Majority of the Spectators quite mifapprehended.

Notice disclaiming liability for eloped wife's debts by Mr. Lambart of Deddington, glover. Half guinea reward for return.

May 31st. 1754.

WHEREAS Elizabeth the Wife of Mr. Lambart, of Deddington in Oxfordshire, Glover, hath eloped from her said Husband, and is supposed to be gone to Service in Buckinghamshire, about Aylebury, Winflow, Hogsdon, Whorwood, or that part of the Country, she having been met between Bicester and Aylesbury the last Friday in May, with a Bundle under her Arm: This is to give Notice, that her said Husband will not pay any Debts she shall contract, but whoever will bring her back to him again, shall receive half a Guinea reward, and all reasonable Charges.

She is about 40 Years of Age, has a red Mole upon her Nose, and another on the left Side of her Neck; had on when she went away a light colour'd Camblet Gown, a black Beaver Hat, a spotted Silk Handkerchief, and a small Hoop; but she had with her a blue and white striped Linnen Gown; has formerly lived in Buckinghamshire, was born at Deddington, and her Maiden Name Makepeace.

Letter to the Printer from A.B., Deddington, as to how England can never be ruined but by a Parliament.

Mr. JACKSON,

England can never be ruined but by a Parliament,

This was the Maxim of a wife and experienced Statefman. And yet common Underftandings, perhaps, may not very eafily be convinced how the Ruin of England can be owing to its Parliament. The following Symptoms, therefore, of fuch a Ruin are offered to the Confideration of the Curious in Politics.

Whenever the Parliament of England fhall determine the Merits of a contefted Election, againft the Majority of free and legal Votes; Then will England be in Danger of being ruined by a Parliament.

Whenever the Parliament of England fhall facrifice the Rights of Britifh Freeholders, by fharing their Privileges among thofe, who have nothing free in the Tenure of their Eftates; Then will England be in Danger of being ruined by a Parliament.

Whenever the Parliament of England fhall fcreen a Returning Officer, from all Punifhment, for the greateft Offence he can be guilty of, that of not Returning according to the Majority upon the Poll; Then will England be in Danger of being ruin'd by a Parliament.

Whenever a Majority of the Commons of England fhall openly profefs, that they Vote from their CONNEXIONS, and becaufe it is a MEASURE; and not from the Truth and Juftice of the Cafe; Then will England be in great Danger of being ruined by a Parliament.

Whenever the Parliament of England fhall affume to themfelves a Power (from an arbitrary Calculation, or any other Pretence whatfoever) to elect their own Members; Then will the Conftitution be overturned, and England will be abfolutely ruined by a Parliament.

How happy is it for us, Mr. JACKSON, that none of thefe Symptoms have, as yet, made their Appearance; and that England, at this Time, is in NO DANGER of being ruined by a Parliament!

Deddington,

I am, Sir. Yours, &c.

8 September 1764

Letter to the Printer from Zachary Stilgoe, Deddington, rebutting misrepresentations concerning an abortive property transaction by the insidious counterparty. Mr. French, a schoolmaster in Deddington, had been instructed to prepare the conveyances.

To the PRINTER, &c.

SIR,

YOUR Woodftock Correfpondent has unluckily confulted the wrong Author for the Exordium of his fpurious Epiftle: Yet had his Arguments been as much a Corroboration as they are a Contradiction of his Cafe, he might have been excufed; but the Impropriety of them admits of no Vindication.

This tender-confcienced Mendicant pretended to lay before the Public the whole Cafe, but like his other Proceedings, he has not revealed a Word of the Facts: Therefore I will take the Trouble upon me to difclofe what he has fo facinoroufly fecreted.

This Gentleman applied to me at Deddington, intreating me to become Purchaser of his Land; when after being wearied by his frequent Visits, and to facilitate him, I agreed for it, upon which Agreement he then received £100 as Part of the Purchase Money; and at the same Time gave Orders to Mr. French, a Schoolmaster in Deddington, to prepare the Conveyances; which manifestly shews on whom the Conditions rested, and by whom they were to be performed. In the mean while I was at great Expence in a Journey to London, to call in Money then out at five per Cent. to pay him his Residue, and discharge the Mortgage: But upon my Return I was informed, this insidious Gentleman had been at Deddington, and made public Declarations that he had not sold his Land to me, nor had any Intentions of so doing; notwithstanding which I could not give Credit to an Information of this Sort, to the Prejudice of a Man, who, previous to such Contract, had made so many Protestations in Defence of Honour, until this truly honourable Gentleman in Person informed me of it. I thereupon told him, that as I was not to have the Land, I would arrest him if he did not pay me my Money.

The Assertion of my representing him as a Bankrupt is wholly false, and no more than an Imputation of his own. And as to the £100 I can without any Subornation or Venality, give an incontrovertible Proof it was not tendered, as well as a Confutation of this meek Gentleman's Charge of Absurdity; therefore shall say no more on this Head, but wait the Event.

With the Words (I cannot admit them Epithets) of Coxcomb, &c. I used no greater Freedom than a merited Application; and the nominal Description he has given me of a Mufhroom is curious indeed! When he has so lately experienced that I have been the Deliverer of one poor Mifcreant, I wonder he should so expose his Principles as to censure their Worth!

Captivity too, seems to pinch this Gentleman much; I was in Hope Custom had made it easy; but since it has not, I must allow him to be a very good Judge of its Frightfulness; and the pretended Increpation on me would have been much to his Honour had it been omitted, when he knew it applicable only to himself; as neither he, nor any one else, ever knew me misrepresent the Character of any Person whatsoever.

To save my own Time, and the Patience of your Readers, I shall avoid an Expansion of this Gentleman's Character for the present, and only add, that I am, Yours, &c. &c.

29 September 1764

Letter from Mercator, Banbury, to the Printer's Deddington Correspondent, remonstrating at length with 'Friend Zachary' for his bombast nonsense &c. Signed 'Thy Friend and Well-wifher'. "P.S. I am told by the People who attend our Market, thou haft quarrelled with every Neighbour in the Parifh; I wifh, Friend, thy quarrelfome Temper don't prove thy Ruin."

To the Printer's Deddington Correfpondent,

FRIEND ZACHARY,

I Can't help looking upon thee and thy Antagonift as two Simpletons, and have entered you both under that Denomination in a little Book which I keep for that Purpofe. That Series of bombaft Nonfenfe in thy two Advertifements, proclaims thee fuch; and Carter is not much better, in condefcending to give thee a formal Anfwer. Thou art certainly impofed upon by fome School Boy, or Attorney's Clerk in his firft Year's Apprenticefhip, who either wants Ideas, or has not Senfe to exprefs them: Or elfe thy Scribe is fome arch Rogue, that has a Mind to expofe thee by his Abfurdities, to the Ridicule of Mankind. As to the Merits of the Caufe, I neither know, nor care on which Side the Ballance lies; but as I am a Perfon in Trade, and confequently carry on my Bufinefs by Credit, as well as Cafh, I can by no Means be reconciled to that licentious Freedom thou haft taken with a Brother Tradefman's Character. We have a Proverb, which fays, he that injures one, threatens a Hundred. - Every Dealer, who has the leaft Regard to his Credit, muft look upon himfelf as wounded thro' Carter's Side: Thou haft fhoot thy Bolt only at one, but upon the leaft Provocation, we muft all expect the fame Ufage; that is, have our Circumftances publifhed in a News-Paper, and in fuch a Light as Malice dictates, and a wanton Pen can defcribe them. Infolvent Mendicant, impending Fate; what can thefe plain Words mean, but that the Perfon to whom they are applied, is juft upon breaking, or has already fhut up his Shop: In fhort, they are fufficient to ruin one Half of the trading People throughout the Nation. As to myfelf, I drive on a good Share of Bufinefs, and maintain my Family in a decent Way, but am by no Means fafe from the Power of a bufy, malicious Tongue: Should a fpiteful Neighbour take the wicked Liberty of pofting me in a News-Paper, and cry me down in every Publick Houfe he enters, tho' I can exchange a Hundred Pound Bill To-day, I might be in Captivity To-morrow. All trading People, I hope, who read this Letter, will unite in a proper Repentment of fuch iniquitous Proceedings: And as to thee, Friend Zachary, I fhall take my Leave of thee with a fhort Fable I read the other Day – "Some wanton Boys, having

 "nothing elfe to do, employed themfelves in pelting Stones at
 "the Frogs in a Pond; many they wounded, fome they killed, at length one of the Frogs defired them to defift, with this
 "fhrewd Obfervation, Confider, Children, though this
"Employment be a Diverfion to you who throw the Stones, it is
"Death to us who feel them."

Thy Friend and Well-wifher,

Banbury, September 28th, 1764.

MERCATOR.

P.S. I am told by the People who attend our Market, thou haft quarrelled with every Neighbour in the Parifh; I wifh,
 Friend, thy quarrelfome Temper don't prove thy Ruin.

3 December 1791

2 houses in Deddington destroyed, and a third damaged, by a fire which started in a barn. Neighbouring straw-thatched buildings saved.

Friday the 25th ult. about Nine in the Evening, the Inhabitants of Deddington in this County, were greatly alarmed by the sudden breaking out of a Fire where a Woman had very imprudently left the Care of her Houfe to a Boy about seven Years of Age, who had dropped a Candle in a Barn adjoining, from whence he was fetching Straw to make himself a Fire. The Houfe where the Fire began, with the next adjoining, were entirely consumed, a Third damaged, and it is very fortunate that the Night and Buildings were wet. The Exertions of the Inhabitants were highly laudable, and the Engine well supplied, which saved a Malthouse, wherein was a considerable Quantity of Malt, as also many other Straw-thatched Buildings contiguous thereto.
