Memorials in the Church

Wooden crosses from WWI to the right of the north door of the church

The wooden crosses or gravemarkers are preserved from their original WWI graves some of which were in France. O A J H Dore also has a CWGC headstone in the churchyard.

Above these crosses is a stone memorial to Ronald Page Bull who died in WWI and was re-interred in Highland British Cemetery, near Le Cateau, France, in 1920. He was the only son of Richard Page Bull, veterinary surgeon for this largely agricultural village.

The wooden plaque immediately below the Royal British Legion Standard is in memory of Francis Garrett and Edward Dumbleton, two friends from Clifton who died in WWII. The plaque originally hung in the Church of St James in Clifton but was moved to the Church in Deddington when St James was closed in 1976.

South aisle - a slate plaque commemorating Lt Churchill - WWII

Lt Robert (Buster) Churchill's name is not on the War Memorial - possibly because his family were not resident in Deddington at the time. However, the plaque indicates the family's very strong attachment to the parish.
